National Cadet Corps (NCC) is a uniformed CCA that trains cadets to be disciplined, confident and resilient individuals.

Through activities such as NCC Camps, air rifle shooting and live firing, cadets will learn leadership skills, teamwork, and responsibility. These values are essential for character-building and can be applied in all areas of life. These activities also teach cadets to build resilience and confidence, remaining calm under pressure and being adaptable to situations.

NCC also focuses on drill training where cadets learn precision through teamwork, communication and coordination. Leadership appointments such as assistant sergeant major and upper sergeant major provide cadets with opportunities to develop their leadership potential and forge meaningful friendships with fellow cadets.
